HONGKONG, 11TH AUGUST, 1881.

We have received a copy of "Sketches in the Foreign Settlements and Native City of Shanghai." The author, Mr. W. Macfarlane, is, we understand, one of the editorial staff of the Shanghai Mercury, and the sketches are a reprint from that journal. As a member of the Fourth Estate, Mr. Macfarlane would doubtless have many opportunities of making himself acquainted with all that is worth seeing in the Model Settlement and its environs, and as no fewer than nineteen different subjects are grappled with in the volume now under review, he has evidently been a keen and careful observer of the sights and scenes therein described.
Giving the author every credit for the care and discretion displayed in the selection of his subjects, and also admitting that the sketches are truthful records of actual scenes and events in every day life in Shanghai, we must confess to feeling grievously disappointed after reading the book.
Mr. Macfarlane's literary style is not attractive; in fact, it forcibly called to mind the crude essays of our school-boy days, and utterly failed to interest us in any one of the sketches. The description of the Mixed Court at Shanghai is the best morceau in the whole volume, probably because it is more in the author's line than any of the other sketches, being an ordinary journalistic report of what we doubt not are very amusing and interesting phases of Chinese life and character.
The attempts at humour, which our author frequently indulges in, are sadly depressing; and the evident straining after effect in describing various matters of minor interest are painfully conspicuous. The following description of Chen, the well known Mixed Court Magistrate is rather amusing:—

"Chen sits near the centre of the bench, with the Assessor on his right hand;—there is room for three or four seats on the bench, and sometimes there are, when a Foreign Consul may be specially interested in any case. In his winter costume,—with great fur-lined silk coat, embroidered in mandarin style; and his up-turned cap, with peacock feather,—Chen presents a more dignified appearance than in his thin summer costume. The old man—for he is over sixty, and looks like seventy—seems oppressed with the heat, and overcome with fatigue. He often sits bareheaded and is seen to be very bald; there is barely enough natural hair on his scalp to form a queue, the tail which hangs thereby being nearly all of silk. There is nothing very remarkable about his features; his expression is rather pleasant; eyes small, dark, and keen; his nose small but not too broad; his upper lip rather large, only a few gray hairs at each side, and a long distance between these two remnants of a mountache; his cheek bones high, and cheeks fallen in slightly; he is not so sleek as he might have been some years ago; and the wrinkles of age are upon his forehead. To see him sit quietly amid all the squabbling of prisoners and runners before him, one would not think he had so much vigour left in him as he sometimes displays when he scolds a prisoner. On the bench before him he keeps a huge leaden ink stand, with tablets of Chinese ink; and there is a curious looking article in lead, which is on the table behind this stand.

It is in the shape of a human hand, cut at the wrist, and is said to be a representation of Buddha's hand; it stands on the wrist as the base, and the fingers are wide apart; it is much larger than the biggest hand of flesh and blood ever seen; if it was stuck on a broom handle it would make a good back-scratcher for the greatest celestial giant ever heard of. This peculiar article is a simple device which serves as a pen or pencil rack, to prevent the bench being dirtied by the official red ink used in writing on the documents which comes to Chen's hands. Besides these articles mentioned, there are of course the small teapot and smaller teacups always at his left hand; his cigar case and a box of matches that light only on the box, always directly before him; and there are still other two things worth mentioning,—these are of simple construction, frequent in use, and yet the use of them is very hard to see. They are two pieces of hardwood, about twelve-inches long, and about an inch in thickness and breadth. When Chen is in a rage,—when he shouts as loudly as he can, and uses up all the strong expletives in his vocabulary, hurling his wild thunders at an unfortunate prisoner,—the grand climax of his invective is reached when he seizes one of these pieces of hardwood, and strikes the other piece, making a tremendous noise that almost drowns his voice, and, which, we suppose he considers an effectual means of striking terror into the heart of the person who is thus so forcibly and violently admonished.
When he is beating these sticks, he looks as if he was going to shy one of them at the prisoner's head, and some of the prisoners look as if they expected it too, and were preparing to dodge it."

Mr. Macfarlane is exceedingly feeble in his descriptions of "An Actor in female dress," "A Curiosity stall," "The Manila Cock-pit," "The Wheelbarrow and its Coolie," and various other subjects; and in "The Mafos Race" and "A morning at the Grand Stand" he is absolutely tedious and uninteresting.

The volume concludes with an account of a trip on the Yang-tze-kiang, written from the author's personal experiences, obtained some time ago in the steam-ship Kung-wo, one of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co.'s river steamers, which vessel it will be remembered, was the first steamer entirely constructed in Shanghai.
Mr. Macfarlane's quotations from Marco Polo's and Mr. Laurence Oli-phant's works on the Yang-tze are interesting enough, but his own experiences are not specially noteworthy, and moreover appear to be generally founded on information vouchsafed by the Captain and officers of the steamer. The same poverty of idea, and school-boy style of writing, which characterise the minor sketches are again conspicuous in this wider field for journalistic enterprise, so that the literary merits of the work, in no single instance rise above the ordinary guide-book level. We have room only for the following account the ancient city of Ngan-king, which may be taken as a fair specimen of the author's style throughout. "The city of Ngan-king was for three years in possession of the Taiping Rebels, and some severe fighting took place round its walls.

It was captured by Li-Hung-chang (now Viceroy of Chili) who made his fame during that rebellion; Ngan-king is his native city, and his mother still resides there. The Imperial troops having been baffled many a time in attempting to capture the city by making breaches in the walls, the Pagoda which is outside the city walls was made use of by Li-Hung-chang; he shelled the city from the top of the Pagoda, and on account of the facility which the sacred edifice thus afforded the Imperial troops, the Pagoda was thoroughly repaired, and is kept in good repair still, and may be considered a monument to Li-Hung-chang more than anything else."

We regret to have had to speak somewhat disparagingly of Mr.
Macfarlane's literary labors, but we have simply expressed, as moderately and fairly as possible, our critical opinions on "Sketches in Shanghai," and to review honestly is a duty, however unpleasant it may prove, which the impartial critic owes to the public, and from which he must never shrink. As the articles were originally written for the columns of a daily newspaper, every allowance must of course be made for the apparent fact that they were hastily put together; but notwithstanding this, we must express our conviction that they are, to use a racing phrase, hardly class enough for publication in book form. At the same time the general public will find in Mr. Macfarlane's book many items of interesting information, sketches of Chinese life and character, with descriptions of manners and customs of our Celestial friends in the Northern Settlement, which will amply repay perusal; and as the volume is well got up, and published at a low price, we can commend it to the attention of our readers, as a praiseworthy, if not altogether successful, attempt to win public favor in a new field of literature.

The American ship Daniel Barnes

Dock this morning.

POLICE COURT.

DECISION OF THE LOTTERY TICKET CASE.

The adjourned case, in which Chan Aping, money changer, &c., was charged with keeping an agency for the sale of lottery tickets, was again brought before Mr. Wodehouse yesterday morning. Senior A. Mercarini, Spanish Consul in Hongkong, gave evidence respecting the Manila Lottery, to the effect that this lottery was under the management of the Manila Government, and was recognised by the Government of Spain, who appointed an officer to superintend it. Mr. Melbye, of Dunn, Melbye & Co., deposed that his firm had done a large amount of business during the past two years with the Wai Wo shop, and that the ostensible business of the concern was dealing in cigars, banking, and money changing. A rather animated discussion took place between Mr. Wotton, who appeared for the prisoner, and the Magistrate, on the right of confiscating the money and property found on the premises at the time of the arrest.
Mr. Wotton contended that the Manila lottery, being a foreign state lottery, did not come within the local Ordinance, and he therefore did not think that even proof of the sale of the Hongkong-Manila lottery tickets would justify confiscation of the whole property found in defendant's possession. In reply to the Magistrate's question as to how he made out the Manila lottery to be different to other lotteries, Mr. Wotton submitted that the evidence he had produced showed it to be under the Spanish Government, and as the legislation on lotteries in this Colony simply referred to local lotteries, the Manila affair was excluded from the operations of the Ordinance.

This explanation did not satisfy his Worship, who stated, after some further discussion, that it had not been proved that there was any legal distinction between tickets sold here under the auspices of a foreign government and ordinary Chinese lottery tickets; and, so far as the confiscation of all gaming implements was concerned, he had no option but to follow the Ordinance, which laid down the course he had to pursue in very plain terms.
Mr. Wodehouse proposed to pronounce judgment on the case on Monday next, but, at Mr. Wotton's urgent request, consented to give his decision at noon to-day.

Mr. Wodehouse accordingly gave his decision in case this forenoon, sentencing the prisoner, Chan Aping, to pay a fine of $200 with the alternative of three months' imprisonment with hard labour; the whole of the lottery tickets, and all other implements seized by the police, excepting the monies, safe, and counter to be forfeited.

A rather amusing case was heard in the Police Court yesterday, before Dr.
Stewart. Alexander William Eversley, steward on board the British ship *P. G.
Carvill*, was charged by the Mr. J. Y.
V. Vernon with being a rogue and vagabond. From the evidence it appeared that the prisoner called at Mr.
Vernon's residence, Rose Villa, on Saturday evening last and enquired for a Miss Goodwin. The man was quite sober, behaved most politely, and on being informed that no such person as Miss Goodwin lived there, he went quietly away. However, he returned on the 8th and also on the 9th inst., in the afternoon on both occasions, and demanded to see Mrs. Vernon, whom he insisted was the Miss Goodwin he wished to meet, and eventually had to be removed by a constable. The prisoner, who is evidently of a romantic turn of mind, stated in explanation that, seeing the waving of a handkerchief from the villa while on board his ship, he went to Mr. Vernon's house last Saturday and enquired for Miss Goodwin, whom he was anxious to see. He saw complainant there, who told him there was no Miss Goodwin there. On Monday the signals were repeated, and he went to the house again, in complainant's absence. He said he wanted to see Miss Goodwin.
The boy said the lady was asleep. He waited a few minutes and a constable was brought to tell him to leave the house. The signals were repeated again on Tuesday from the West side of the Villa. He went there, and found that the occupant, Mr. Sharp, was at the Peak. He went again to Mr. Vernon's house to enquire for Miss Goodwin, and a constable came and took him away.—Mr. Vernon requested that the defendant might not be punished, as his ship was to sail in the course of the day, and he did not wish him left behind.—Prisoner promising to go on board his ship at once, the Magistrate discharged him with an admonition.

MARINE COURT.

The following cases were heard in the Marine Court yesterday, before Captain Thomsett, R.N., Harbour-Master and Marine Magistrate.

Michael McCarthy, seaman on board the British barque Ambassador, was charged by Robert Helmore Bidwell, master of the said barque, with desertion of duty.

Captain Bidwell stated that defendant refused to do his duty and wanted his discharge.

Defendant simply refused to return to his duty, and was sentenced to seven days' hard labour at the order of the captain.

John Johnson, Julius Silvester, and Joseph Williams, seamen belonging to the American barque Freeman, were charged by Marcus Lafayette Howes,
ion on the 2nd instant.

The Captain stated that defendants were brought to this Court on the application of the American Consul on the 3rd instant for refusal of duty.

The Magistrate ordered them to be taken before the Consul to explain their complaint. The defendants, to the best of his knowledge, had not been to the Consul; they had kept themselves stowed away somewhere until arrested by the police on Tuesday.

Defendants said that they would not go to their duty, and were sentenced to fourteen days' hard labour at the order of the Captain.

LATEST COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Thursday, August 11th, 1881.
One o'clock P.M.

Docks are a good deal healthier this morning, as, after a large number of sales had been booked at 43 for cash and the end of the month, the increasing demand could not be met, and holders declined to sell unless at an advance, which was not forthcoming. The shares are now very steady at 43, with buyers at that price, but sellers hold off for better terms. A few lots of Banks have been offered for 113 per cent. cash, but as no business has resulted, the quotation is quite a nominal one.
Until after the Shareholders' Meeting on the 12th inst., business in Banks will be of very small account. China Fires have gone back a little, and after a few sales at $290 per share, the stock is quite weak at the price, sellers being very anxious to do further business. Steamboats are still offered at 25% prem. per share, without eliciting a single response.
The most important business, however, which has resulted since our last issue, has been in the China Sugar Refining Company's stock.
At $155 per share, cash and for September 1st, a large number of transactions of a very important character have been booked, and the shares are now steady at the same rate. We have not heard Hotels mentioned for several days, and stocks not alluded to above remain unchanged.

SHANGHAI.

4th August, 1881.

The news under the head of a correspondent's letter coming from Shanghai naturally resolves itself at the present moment into three short sentences—money tight, general public sober, and nothing stirring. But a correspondent is supposed to send something in the way of items even if he has to perform a miracle to create them, and therefore I transmit to you a few memos, which I hope will be of interest. After the excitement caused by the Hochung and Lapwing case, and the agitation re the proposed tramways, Shanghai at present finds itself in a state of calmness which is somewhat refreshing when the mercury is boiling up into the nineties, and maledorous smells are on the increase. There is, however, an expression of strong opinion with regard to the Hochung and Lapwing collision case. Though opinions, like writers, differ, the currency of opinions on this matter, tends to show that the public think it a pity that the case had not been decided one way or the other, for by the present judgment it is now left exactly in the same position as it was before it came into court. The ways of law courts and their presidents are something like those of Providence, past finding out, and we be to the mortal who attempts to question the will and decision of either. Whether the judgment in this case is satisfactory or not I will not presume to determine. But this I know—that the whole proceedings, and nothing has come out of them, have cost the parties a pretty figure. It is reliably stated that Messrs. Drummond and Wainwright, counsel for the plaintiff, were paid a retaining fee of 200 taels each per diem, and this in addition to legal and other expenses. As regards the counsel on the other side—Mr. Robinson, who did nearly all of the court work, and Mr. Myburgh—they were, you can easily guess, paid well by their clients, the British Government, for their labour, but report saith not what their earnings were. The assessors were paid 150 taels each for sitting in court, and everybody got something out of the case, but the unfortunate reporters and court officials. As to the former they had a hard time of it for eight or ten days. Courtesy to the Press is almost unknown here, and during the progress, at least, it was near the finish of the case, the reporters were treated gratis to unfair imputations by an enraged counsel, who said that there was only one shorthand writer (presumably his protégé) in the place. Now, considering the Mercury, the Courier, and the Daily News—each have a shorthand scribe, and two of these reporters have a deservedly excellent reputation as verbatim note-takers, and the third adds to skill in phonography a long experience in law reporting, the ungenerous imputations of the learned counsel on the "Gentlemen of the Fourth Estate" were without foundation, and in my humble opinion, they were uncalled for. I remember me, "when Plancus was Consul," that the said lawyer who reflected on the note-takers of the local Press, was punished by his long-winded orations either being published verbatim, or else condensed to the conventional "two sticks." But lack-a-day! times have changed since I penny-a-liv'd and reported the speeches of the Demosthenes and Ciceros of the day. You have publicly heard in your island home that the Hochung intend appealing against the decision. That is a fact. The motion asking for leave to do so will be brought in next month, but I hear that the 10th is fixed for hearing it, though that date is unlikely as the Court is now in the middle of the vacation, which it will not break into for the wealth of India.

With respect to the tramway schemes the proposals of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co. have been agreed to by the Anglo-American Municipal Council and the French Municipal Council. In justice to a large section of the community, I must say that the proposals have been objected to and voted against, because they were deemed prejudicial to public and private interests. Nor are the Consuls unanimously in favour of the project. They held a meeting lately, which was not a public one, but of the business transacted there sufficient has transpired to acquaint the public of the opinions expressed thereat by the different Consuls. The Consul for the United States both before and after this meeting declared that he will object to the scheme to the bitter end. He says it is unconstitutional; and that the means taken to obtain the sense of the community on the subject were not such as would meet the approval of Englishmen or Americans who have a knowledge of representative Government. He has furthermore declared that the sense of the community has not been obtained on this question; but that Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., through Mr. Keswick, the Chairman of the Council, obtained a preponderance of proxy votes, and thus thwarted the wishes of 90 out of every 100 members of the Anglo-American Settlement. Those 90 it is said were opposed to the scheme. The French Consul did not, it seems, express himself opposed to the scheme, and the official sanction having been obtained, there was consequently no difficulty in compelling a meeting of French electors to vote for the plan, in the abstract. This meeting was held on the 1st instant, and a more barefaced system of procedure than that adopted by the French Council has never been known. The electors were told that whether they negatived, or voted in favour of the proposal, it mattered not, as the Council had the power, and would exercise it too, of having its own sweet will in the matter, that is, have tramways with such modification as they (the Council) thought fit, whether their constituents willed it or not. I believe the China Merchants' Company who have large interests in French town, and several English land-renters intend agitating the matter and making their objections heard, and if they do, then the veil which has hid so much that savours of irregularity, favouritism, unpatriotism, corruption, and despotic power in the French Administration will be torn aside, and a pretty state of affairs will be brought to light. The machinations of a priestly party, and the inclinations of a few influential Bonapartists have had a baleful influence, it is said, in French affairs, especially those appertaining to the official functions of the Administration. American citizens are also talking of holding meetings en masse on the subject; but I think what they say can be condensed into that small word—"blow." There is no doubt tramways will be a benefit to the settlement, but our folk are very short-sighted in such matters, and their objections are based on self-interest, a Pedlington conservatism, coupled with a dislike of some of the supporters of the project.

We have no amusements here. Signor Vela is still in Manila negotiating for a band, and I have been told that he has got together as likely a lot of music murderers as any one can obtain from the Philippines. We have a private band, that of St. Cecilia, which could discourse most excellent music, but our City Fathers would not hear of them being brought into the Public Garden. The said Signor Vela has drawn 120 taels per month for four months, while there was no band in existence, but we must wait another four months (he still drawing salary) until he succeeds in organising a "Band of ferocious Manila musicians." The Chinese theatres are in full swing, and one of them has been "delectating" large audiences by playing a travesty on European manners. The theatre which has been doing this, is situated just outside the walls of the city. I visited it one night, and a grosser spectacle I never saw than that presented. It was a play very much like the opera of "The hundred Virgins" (lescent vierges) except that the persons cast on the island are European women, and the visitors are Chinese. The scenes are of the lowliest description. The celebrated actors have imitated nature abominably, for the women who are on this desert island are made to typify that worst half of the world which we never mention to ears polite. The indecency of the "pieces" is revolting, and shows what an exaggerated idea the Chinese have of that species of vice which we politely call the social evil. Their notions of European licentiousness are hideous.

A cry cometh from the parched land of Egypt for ice! ice! ice! and yet none is forthcoming. Our ice works will be finished by the middle of next winter. Till they manufacture ice, we must content ourselves with the wretched collection of glacial deposits which the industrious Chinese collect in mid-winter from ponds wherein clothes are washed, and dogs and minor animals drowned. We cry for ice vainly; but no answer comes, in fact the only response we get is that of the unspeakable Turk who says to everything Balakum Balakum—we shall see.

Changes in the internal administration of H.I.M. Customs at Shanghai seem to be the order of the day. It appears that the authorities wish to obtain the services of young medical men to perform clerical work in the inside offices. After a probation of say six months the medicals will be transported to an outpost, where they will act as assistant or deputy commissioners, and also perform the medical duties that erstwhile were attended to by special medicals. The idea is a good one, and the addition of professional and highly educated men to the indoor staff will considerably raise the status of the service, which undoubtedly is the best paid in the world. Four medical men have just been installed in the office of H.I.M. Customs in Shanghai; of course, they occupy good positions, and it is said that five more are on their way out. The physicians are young, their ages ranging from twenty-four to twenty-eight. The Customs service is to be reorganised up North so it is said; but in what respects I know not. However, I shall keep you posted up in the latest moves, for I have special means of information.

SAIGON.

The French Government in Saigon propose to try an experiment which ought and cannot fail to possess considerable interest to the authorities here and in Hongkong. From the beginning of next year, the Saigon Opium Farm is to be abolished, and a system of excise is to be adopted instead, that is to say, the manufacture and sale of Opium is to be taken by Government in its own hands, and the Opium monopoly is to be administered by its own officials. In the report for 1880 of Mr. Tremlett, H.M. Consul in Saigon, it is stated that the first Opium Farm in Saigon was given in 1863 to a French firm for $92,000 per annum, equivalent to about £20,000 at the exchange of the day, but it soon ended in a conflict with the Government, and the latter then endeavoured to carry it on, but gave it up after a three months' trial, and in 1864 it was first placed in the hands of Chinese, who have held it ever since for $10,200 per month. In 1868 it realised francs 2,091,000; in 1873, frs. 3,250,000; and in 1878, frs. 6,730,000. In January last the united Farms for Cochinchina and Cambodia were put up at the upset price of frs. 8,500,000 per annum for a term of three years, but the tenders were far below that price, and the French Government, having good reason to suspect a combination among the Chinese to keep down the price offered, determined once more to take the Opium Monopoly into their own hands. The question was submitted to the consideration of the new Colonial Council, established on the 8th February last, and that body unanimously voted, on political, economical, and moral grounds, for the abolition of the Farm and the establishment of a direct excise duty. A decree to this effect was signed in Paris on the 1st May last, and is published in the Saigon Journal Officiel of the 6th instant. It is followed by two other decrees dated the 4th May, re-organising the Civil Service of the Colony, so as to meet the requirements of this new state of affairs. The Journal Officiel also contains a semi-official notification warning the public that the Opium Farm, at present held by Messrs. Bau Hap & Co., ceases on the 31st December next, and that from the 1st January a direct excise duty will be substituted. From the morning of the 1st January 1882, Opium will be sold in specified Excise warehouses, in pots, closed and sealed with an official stamp, with contents and quality guaranteed. Licensed shops may be opened in every locality wherever sanctioned by the authorities, and by any person who can obtain a license from the Board of Excise, and the public are warned that all hawking, sale, or possession of any opium other than that of the Excise Office will be considered and punished as contraband. The experiment is certainly a novel one, and will be watched with interest, no doubt, from here and Hongkong. Its success seems a doubtful matter. The French authorities themselves seem to expect at first some diminution of revenue, but console themselves with the hope that any falling off from this branch of revenue may be made up by an increase in other branches. Certainly the French Excise officers will have their work cut out for them to meet and circumvent the ingenuity of Chinese smugglers. The past experience of the Government, however, and the minute and accurate statistics they have always made a point to collect with regard to the working of the Farm in Chinese hands, cannot but prove of eminent service in the new experiment. The habit of opium smoking, says Mr. Tremlett, is not general in French Cochinchina, but it is growing. In 1880, 800 chests were imported into Saigon.—Daily Times.
